

_____
Plaintiff(s) (Landlord, Owner, or Lessor)

vs.

Case No.:

_____
Defendant(s) (Tenant)

AFFIDAVIT OF OWNERSHIP AND NOTICE TO PARTIES

Notice: You have filed a case seeking the removal of a tenant. Under Florida law, only a landlord, the landlord’s attorney or the landlord’s agent may file this type of case. A landlord is either the owner or the lessor (the person who leased the property to the tenant) of the premises subject to this action. F.S. 83.43(3) and 83.59(2). The manager must have written authorization from the landlord, and cannot file suit in its own name or seek a money judgment. If the eviction becomes contested, meaning a hearing is required, the manager cannot take any further action. Only an attorney is authorized to handle contested evictions on behalf of a landlord.

If the party who is filing the lawsuit (Plaintiff) is not represented by an attorney, then the Plaintiff must file an affidavit stating that he/she is either the owner, lessor, landlord or the landlord’s agent.

If you are acting as a landlord’s agent, you must also attach a copy of your written authorization or contract to act as the landlord’s agent. Such a document may be an executed property management agreement. If you elect not to file the agreement, the owner shall complete the Affidavit of Owner and Consent. Your failure to attach the written agreement/contract or to file the owner’s consent affidavit may result in a delay or denial of the eviction.

Also, your failure to attach the lease/written agreement/contract or file the owner's consent affidavit may result in a delay or denial of the eviction.
